

AS MORE SENATE REPUBLICANS CALL FOR A CHANGE, WILL HOUSE REPUBLICANS STAY-THE-COURSE IN IRAQ?

This afternoon, President Bush once again refused to heed the will of the American people and change course in Iraq. But a growing number of Senate Republicans are calling for a change in policy. House Republicans, however, choose to ignore the facts on the ground and cling to President Bush's stay-the-course strategy. When will they listen to their constituents and stop rubberstamping the President's failed Iraq policy?

SENATOR PETE DOMENICI (R-NM): "I am calling for a new strategy that will move our troops out of combat operations and on the path to continuing home." [NY Times, 7/6/07]

SEN. RICHARD LUGAR (R-IN), RANKING MEMBER, FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE: "In my judgment, the costs and risks of continuing down the current path outweigh the potential benefits that might be achieved. Persisting indefinitely with the surge strategy will delay policy adjustments that have a better chance of protecting our vital interests over the long term. . . . Our security interests call for a downsizing and redeployment of U.S. military forces to more sustainable positions." [Senate Floor, 6/25/07]
